Poly is fortunate to reside within a well-maintained, family-oriented neighborhood that provides a calm and safe environment for its students. The rich history of our neighborhood includes long-time residences and notable architecture, such as 1909 Sylvanus Marston bungalows, Tournament Fields landmark district, and Poly’s 1907 Myron Hunt classrooms.

The Poly community benefits from residing within this neighborhood and should strive to work together with its neighbors to preserve and improve the quality of life within the neighborhood.

We encourage the Poly community and its neighbors to embrace the following principles in dealing with each other:

- A spirit of mutual respect and generosity;
- A collaborative approach to problem-solving;
- A shared appreciation for maintaining the quality of our neighborhood.